A distressing accident occurred in the Little Bow district on the 20th ult., which has caused a pall to hang over that neighborhood. It appears that Master Albert Schacht, the nine year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Schacht, was out riding and his pony stumbled in a bad hole. The youthful rider was thrown from the saddle, but one foot became fastened in the stirrup and the lad was dragged a considerable distance. The animal ran wildly towards its stable, and in passing through a gap severed to one side in such a manner that the head of the dragging boy came with great force against the gate post, causing instant death.—High River Times.

What Others Say

The Edmonton Journal referring to the appearance of Nannie Strachan and Gavin Spence in that city says "Miss Strachan's singing of Scottish melodies was a revelation even to those who have been familiar with those melodies from childhood." The press have commended this company wherever they have been and if you do not take advantage of their appearance in Oddfellows' hall, Crossfield, on Monday February 7th, you will miss a treat. PIONEER PASSES AWAY

Geo. Murdoch, who passed away in Calgary on Thursday morning was the father of George, Cal and William, of the Barb Wire Ranch, his eldest daughter is also a resident of these parts being Mrs. Frank Collicutt, who is at present visiting in California. The deceased was first mayor of Calgary and to write his obituary is to write the history of the early days of that city. He was born in St. John's, N.B., on April 29th, 1850, and came to Calgary in 1884. He was first elected mayor in 1884 and took a prominent part in all matters of municipal importance. He was a charter member of the Bow River Masonic Lodge and the Alberta Lodge No. 1 of the Oddfellows. For many years he carried on a saddlery business on Ninth Ave. His death, so close to that of his old political rival, Jas. Riley, has removed two of the men most prominently connected with the early days of Calgary.

ALBERTA LEMONS

Were you ever handed a lemon? We are serious. A real Alberta lemon, picked in this province, in January. The other day S. K. High, who lives four miles west of town, came into our office one day recently and handed us a real, ripe Alberta lemon. We thought at first that he was trying to work us old wheeze off on us but he said that he also had some oranges, which were not ripe yet. The plants are indoors but have thrived in a remarkable manner.

Obituary

It is our sad task this week to record the death of Francis Ethel and Frank Edward children of Mr. and Mrs. Levi Bone. The little ones were twins being nine months of age. The boy was not well on Thursday, January 27th, but it was attributed to his teeth and that any serious illness was impending was not even dreamed of. But the little girl shortly after began to fall ill and the serious nature of the illness became apparent with great rapidity. The boy passed away on the morning of Saturday, January 29th, at about nine, and about the same hour on the following day, January 30th, the little girl died. We extend our deepest sympathy, as do the many friends of the bereaved parents, to Mr. and Mrs. Bone. The funeral took place on Monday, and was largely attended by the townspeople and members of the Oddfellows' lodge, of which order Mr. Bone is a member.

Card of Thanks.

Mr. and Mrs. Bone whose recent loss appears in another part of this paper desire to convey to their many friends their deep felt appreciation of the kindness and sympathy expressed and extended to them in their sad loss.

Card of Thanks.

Mr. Jno. Lennon, the death of whose wife we recorded in our issue of last week, desires us through the medium of our columns to express his deep appreciation of the kindness and sympathy of his many friends during his recent bereavement.

GRAIN MAN WINS CASE

A grain case which aroused considerable local interest was heard in Calgary on Tuesday when D. A. McCrimmon sued John Hehn for non-delivery of flax which had been contracted for at a certain figure. The contract called for about 2,000 bushels, and the price $1.05 per bushel. Hehn sold the flax to the Alberta-Pacific Elevator Co., later for $1.45 and McCrimmon instituted proceedings. This was the second hearing of the case and the judge gave the plaintiff damages of thirty cents per bushel, amounting to $600, the defendant to pay the costs of the court.

VILLAGE COUNCIL

The regular meeting of the council was held in Bishop's Hall on Tuesday, February 1st, when all members were present. The meeting was called to order at 7.30 p.m., and the minutes of the previous meeting were read and upon motion of councillor Calhoun were adopted.

The following motions were also made and carried—

McAnally—Harvie—That the constable be instructed to inspect the village with respect to the houses requiring a ladder upon the roof; and the secretary-treasurer be instructed to take action for the prosecution of parties who neglect to comply with the ordinance in this respect before noon on Wednesday, February 2nd—Carried unanimously.

Harvie—Calhoun—That B. Burkholder, the village constable, be paid $7.00 in full for 28 head of cattle driven to the pound—Carried unanimously.

McAnally—Calhoun—That the constable be paid twenty-five cents for each horse or animal left in the village to suffer from exposure to the cold. The animal in question to be taken in charge by the constable and the owner thereof to pay all costs and fee in connection—Carried unanimously.

Calhoun—Harvie—That meeting adjourn—Carried unanimously.

Where is It?

Perhaps in years to come some archaeologist filled with ancient lore will wander this way. Filled with dreams of discovery, loaded down with ancient lore he will stumble upon the burnt out ruins of Crossfield. With the remarkable persistence peculiar to his species he will long and laboriously search among the old weed grown wrecks of what had once been prosperous mercantile concerns. Perchance he may stumble upon a paper covered with many remarkable hieroglyphics. It will be studied, examined, become a subject of much controversy in the papers of the day before being placed in a museum. Some will hold that it was a petition to raise money for a flying machine, others that it was a contribution to the Canadian navy; but we sitting up among the clouds, perhaps, will know that it was a petition circulated in 1909 for the raising of $2,000 for fire protection. The petition was to have been presented to the council but for its mysterious disappearance.

Editorial

Such a lulu. Such an uproar. In every corner they stood. Points of law never dreamed of by lawyers were brought up, and it was all over the poll tax. Many versions of the rights of man were handed out, and we thought that if we published the wording of the section in the ordinance relating to the tax it would help a little. "Except persons of His Majesty's Naval or Military Force on full pay or in actual service, or of the Royal North West Mounted Police, every male inhabitant of the village of the age of twenty-one and upwards who has resided in the said village for a period of two months or more, and has not been assessed on the assessment roll of the village, may be taxed at a certain sum yearly; such tax shall not be less than two dollars per year, and not more than three dollars per year." Again the act says "Persons residing within three miles of the village who have a place of business therein, and whose names are not on the assessment roll or who receive employment and are paid wages or a salary therein, are hereby liable to pay poll tax subject to the provisions of this Act." The tax is due within three days after the demand by the Sec.-Treas., and in case of neglect or refusal the Sec.-Treas. may levy on same by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the defaulter with the cost of the distress and sale. If the person who refuses is an employee the Sec.-Treas. can demand the amount from the employer who is expected to deduct the amount from the wages of the employee.

A little boy visiting some friends was compelled by a storm to stay the night. There were girls in the house but no boys; so the sleepy little guest instead of going to bed in his manly pajamas, had to wear a little girl's "nighty." He was too tired to take any notice of it; but in the morning when he found himself attired with lace and ribbons, he cried out bitterly "I'll never stay here any more to sleep in girl's clothes. If I ever do stay here; I'll sleep raw.

DAME FASHION'S DECREES

HOW the young girl lusted to give up her dainty lingerie frocks and tab gowns when the season began to call for the heavier materials. But in the multiplicity of fascinating styles for the under woman the girl has been has not been forgotten. If she is yet in school there will be more use for a little semi-evening frock than the typical evening gown.

The frocks are all of soft silk or the silk crepe this season. One of the semi-evening frocks is of lace and soft silk. It has a simple gown skirt trimmed with a broad band of all-over lace which has a fold of the fabric at each edge. The waist is what is called the round waist and has soft revers of lace going back over the shoulders in soft folds that cross at the back. The belt is of soft ribbon of the same shade trimmed with a rosette of ribbon. A tiny lace yoke forms the Dutch neck and the lace vest is headed with folds of ready-tucked net or chiffon. The sleeves are especially pretty, the tops are of lace, the puffs of the fabric and the cuffs of the tucked net or chiffon, and are finished with the twist and rosette of the ribbon.

Another equally charming design for the young girl is one of silk crepe that might well be developed in the Rajahs or rougher silks that the silk centers are showing. The skirt has the plain effect though it is developed with a pointed tail, a square back tunic, and all-over lace tab panels and finished with a fold of the same material or of silk of the same tone as the costume. Another fold puts the finishing touch to the neck, sleeves and front of the bodice. The sleeves are cut in one piece with the waist, as is so plainly the Paris fashion. The giraffe is of soft silk and heavy all-over lace forms the bodice trimming with narrow lace at the neck.

An evening frock for the younger girls is no more elaborate than the semi-evening dresses that have just been described. The waist is a round one with sleeves cut in one piece with it and a bib effect. All-over lace is the main trimming as in the other gowns. It forms the elbow sleeves and yoke. There is room for some embroidering and an artistic silk giraffe. The skirt is the most graceful feature of the dress. It has a pauser tunic draped in points over a full skirt and will be especially welcome to the lallish young girl who looks longingly on any pattern which looks as if it would detract from her height.

Perfect costumes are picturesque and velvet is a foundation for some of the most picturesque costumes. Velvets this season have reigned in tulle, in muff and in costumes. One velvet suit seen is of Russian cut. The long coat may be used as an extra garment or with the suit. The skirt is a semi-train with seven gores. The coat is double-breasted with a plait effect on the waist. The back has an inverted plait and the coat is fastened in at the waist line with a loose belt. The cuffs are trimmed with soutache or embroidery.

A great many of the afternoon costumes are of velvet. They are all of dark colors with broad white collars and cuffs lying back on the dark velvet. For street wear bands of fur are used extensively. The light colors for indoor wear are made from Irish crochet lace, rare point and Venetian.

The fondness for top coats has not diminished. They hold their own with the short skirt. Splendor is the quality that can be attached to many of them.

Fur, which was a luxury, is now a necessity, or so one would imagine from its frequency. As a top coat it is first cousin to the leaves of Vallambrosa. Semi-precious pelts have lowered prices to rock bottom, and one now adds such a garment to the wardrobe, whereas in other days it was the main feature of the wardrobe.

Offers its purchase necessitated careful economy along the whole range of clothes.

This season the long fur coat is worn by the lady of the immense and the girl going to work at 8 o'clock a.m. Its frequency has nothing to do with the season, but it is a possession for fair days and rough ones.

Beyond the everyday garment there is a multitude of other top coats for formal occasions which are quite an important feature of the season. Those of panne velvet are very handsome, edged with skunk, minkskin or bear. These are lined with brilliantly colored brocades and satin. Even the large immense parkas are edged with fur to add to the costly and sumptuous look.

Others are of watered silk, of that lovely weave that has a faint rippling water over its surface, nothing heavy and definite as is the marking of moire. These are full length in effect and softened by fur collar and cuffs.

There is also a tendency to edge the front that fastens over with an inch of fur. There is much character in this. It gives the look of warmth our winter days demand. It is a cheerful effect of a wood fire to the beholder.

There is also a tendency to edge the front that fastens over with an inch of fur.

Evening toilettes of lace and silk and chiffon and even old silk shawls have been converted into costumes in the hands of a clever dressmaker. One is of soft silk clinging to the figure and trimmed with V's made of the fabric, edged with the material cross in front and four small jacket ends at the back. The bodice and sleeves are all in one piece and tiny lace sleeves peep out from beneath the fabric sleeves and lace trim the neck and the scarf.

A glove cannot make a toilette, but it can complete it in a charming manner and it must be just the glove for that gown.

The tailored suits of mannish mixtures demand the heavy skins and large, single-button fastening and the tailored gowns of more elaborate construction require a lighter weight glove and lighter color.

Unless a glove exactly matches a dress gown it will be of white in preference, then champagne, tan or pearl grey. Black gloves are a boon to women having large hands, as they make them seem much smaller.

The eight-button gloves are always graceful with dress sleeves, avoiding any dividing line between glove and sleeve. The glove sales attract shoppers on account of the low prices for 12, 16, and 20 button gloves which retailers sell below value, while they will undoubtedly be favored in the spring when elbow and two-third sleeves will lead.

If possessed of too many gloves for present use wrap them in paraffin paper to keep them supple.

Find a make to fit and a clerk to suit and keep to both. A skin should be soft and elastic when pulled crosswise. The color will lighten two tones or shades with stretching. Long gloves are more becoming slightly wrinkled on the arm rather than worn pulled up plainly over a too thin, too short or too shoving an arm. The perfect wrist and forearm can easily any or no glove—others cannot.

Lighter laces are creeping in and ousting the heavy laces that have held sway so long. The renewed popularity of tails and mania were the first signs of the change. Now the dresses are filling with chauntilly, imitation thread and English thread.

If these laces succeed in staying in demand it means that the spring gowns will require a quantity of such fine laces as the burr, for that is the use to which such fine laces are put. Dark colors have been in vogue and now a "black season" is predicted by the fashion prophets.

The lingerie waist will not be an affair of set lines of insertion and embroidery and rows of tucks. The spring will find them artistically varied with detachable yokes of lace and embroidery, collar-and-revers, and suspender novelties.

The fall of the instant is strictly Parisian. It is the single or double ruffle seen on all of the waists, whether they be cotton, linen, silk or chiffon. The ruffles are bonneted or lace will be braided and embroidered, and as the season advances they will tend to have transparent neck and sleeve effects, edged, and are dressy details in the winter waists.

SUNSPOTS AND MAGNETIC STORMS

PROF. R. A. GREGORY recently gave the first of two lectures which he had promised to deliver at Queen's College, Harley Street. The subject was "Sunspots and Magnetic Storms," and the lecture was illustrated by a series of lantern slides. By means of photographs of the variations of the magnetic needle, the lecturer showed how, in addition to the usual variation of the needle from the direct North, there were occasional times when it revealed more irregular disturbances, and this occurred at the time of the magnetic storms of 1852 and 1905, when there happened to be large spots on the sun. In consequence, it had been suggested—and the suggestion at first seemed a plausible one—that the sunspots were the cause of the magnetic storms. This theory was not, however, accepted by astronomers and men of science.

Examining more closely the connection between sunspot activity and the magnetic conditions of the earth, Prof. Gregory showed a table prepared at Greenwich Observatory from the records of the daily photographs of the condition of the sun between the years 1875 and 1900, which demonstrated that the average daily spotlessness varied every year, and that the interval between the minimum degree was between eleven and twelve years. This periodic fever of the sun was thus very definite. The spots themselves did not break out all over the sun's surface, but were confined to two zones a few degrees north and south of the sun's equator. It was a definitely ascertained fact that just after the minimum of the sun's spotlessness the spots began to break out away from the sun's equator and gradually worked down toward the equator. A diagram was shown illustrating the wavering of the magnetic needle which corresponded with the rise and fall of the sunspots, and the variation also of the Northern Lights, which were caused by the discharge of electricity in the higher atmosphere, so that, the lecturer said, we had the earth's electricity and the earth's magnetism both connected with spots on the sun. These magnetic storms, however, had no connection with the eleven-year intervals he had spoken of, but it had been ascertained that there was an interval of about twenty-seven and a half days between them, and in all probability that interval was connected with the rotation of the sun on its axis in a period of about twenty-five days. This rotation, however, differed in different parts of the sun—namely, that only one part of the sun's outer surface—namely, the equatorial region—had the rotation was the key to the table, which showed an interval of about twenty-seven days between magnetic storms. Some part of the sun, which was more active in ejecting material than other parts, went out in flames that might be related to sun-spots, and that disturbed our magnets.

Sunspots were probably storms in the sun's atmosphere and Prof. Hale, director of the Solar Observatory of the Carnegie Institution of Washington, California, had succeeded in photographing the gases separately on the sun's surface. Two photographs were shown of calcium and hydrogen so taken, the hydrogen being in a high state of turmoil, and the lecturer said that Prof. Hale had proved that this vapor, rotating with great velocity, was in a highly magnetic condition, and he deduced the fact that these storms might really be the cause of the disturbances in the earth's magnetism. That was a simple way of stating it; but it was only the beginning of a very difficult inquiry. It had been suggested that it was not the sun which disturbed the earth at all, but that there was a great wave passing through the Solar System, of which both the sun and earth were part, and which presented the question must be left where it was.

WHERE HARD MONEY IS WANTED

FOR a long time the U.S. Treasury has not minted any silver dollars; but it has some hundreds of millions of them on hand and they are in constant demand in some parts of the country—so much so, indeed, that the people who want them are glad to pay the express charge for their transportation.

This is true, for instance, of certain manufacturing towns in New England, where the workpeople like hard money, and prefer, for reasons best known to themselves, to receive their wages in big round, metal dollars. Contractors who employ great numbers of men, building railroads or doing other work outdoors, commonly call for large quantities of silver dollars. It is more convenient for them to pay the wages where the work is being done—that is to say, in the open air—and paper money is liable to blow away. Under such circumstances it is easier to handle the cash in its metallic form, saving it out from bags.

The Southern States use more silver dollars than any other section of the country, and many millions of these dollars are shipped by the Treasury every year to the region below Mason and Dixon's line, to move the crops. The negroes who live in the cotton fields are particularly anxious to receive their pay in this shape. They like metal money because it can only exist in gas cases, but there is a special and rather curious reason for their preference in this regard. It is that paper money cannot be stored in the ground without danger of destroying it, whereas, as experience has shown, silver dollars will endure this mode of treatment very well.

The next meeting will be held at Miss N. Wilson's on Wednesday, March 2nd.

The ladder is on the roof and the cow is in the pound. My but the by-laws are by-laws under the new regime. Twenty-eight head of cattle were stored in the local pound on Tuesday, and on Wednesday it could not truthfully be said that "Everybody works but father," for if the "old man" was not placing the ladder in position himself he was directing and superintending the operation which was being carried out by his son and heir.

Owing to lack of time the school report is held over to next week.

is Not So Unpleasant as One Might Imagine—The Men Like It.

The average person would not be anxious to live on a submarine. However, life there is not as unpleasant or dangerous as one might imagine, but it is entirely different from that led aboard other types of ships. The crew, usually consisting of two officers and 14 men, is selected from volunteers after a most rigid physical examination. Service rarely extends beyond a period of two years and real work on a submarine is limited to about three weeks in the summer and one in the winter. During the remainder of the time the men live on a "parent" ship or on shore. The boat is, however, put through the various evolutions once every week. Owing to the character of the men selected discipline is always perfect.

Life on board a submarine is essentially "in common." The way men live and many objects are crammed together in a narrow space is almost miraculous. The first impression on entering is one of heat, the air being rather close and heavy, but the men soon become accustomed to it. Standing room space is about six and one-half feet and toward both ends the seat tapers away to a point. There are no portholes. The hatchway in the conning tower is the only exit. Under water electric light is used. There are ventilators, but when the boat dives they are shut off with a cap. Cooking is done in an electric oven and no foods which have a strong or disagreeable smell are used. Of course, smoking is allowed only when on the surface and then on the bridge.

There is scarcely any noise in a submarine when submerged. The greatest depth the boat descends does not exceed 30 feet. At that depth her speed is about eight knots. The air is quite "breathable" for four hours, but in case of emergency the crew can remain closed in for 70 hours without danger. The men love the life. With the officers they are as one family sharing everything equally, including the dangers, which are not much to speak of, provided every one does his part. When the weather is fair there is very little rolling. In rough weather the men escape knocking about by holding on to "steadying lines."

Mother's Experience.

Pond Mother—Now, look here, George. I want you to break off with that girl. She is very pretty, and all that, but I know her too well too want you to risk your life and happiness by marrying her. Why, she knows no more about housekeeping than I do about Greek—not a bit!

George—Perhaps not, but she can learn.
Mother—After marriage is rather late for her.
George—But you said yourself that you did not know a thing about housekeeping until after you were married.

Mother—Very true, George, and your poor father died of dyspepsia twenty years ago.

Sturgeons For Northern Rivers.

An effort is to be made to stock the Hudson river as well as other northern rivers of the United States with sturgeon, a fish which once swarmed in their waters, but which has since been exterminated. The proposal comes from Horace G. Knowles, formerly American Minister to the Balkan states. Through Mr. Knowles' efforts the Roumanian Government fry, some cases of young sturgeon and smaller food fish to populate our waters. The first consignment of several hundred thousand fry will probably be planted in the Delaware river. The native sturgeon have been all but exterminated by wastefulness—Scientific American.

Strength of Human Hair.

A human hair of average thickness can support a load of six and one-quarter ounces, and the average number of hairs on the head is about 30,000. A woman's long hair has a total tensile strength of more than five tons, and this strength can be increased one-third by twisting the hair. The ancient made practical use of the strength of human hair. The cords of the Roman catapult were made of the hair of slaves, and it is recorded that the free women of Carthage offered their luxuriant tresses for the same use when their city was besieged by the Romans.

Lost a Breakfast.

When in London early in his career Paul De Chailly, the explorer, received an invitation to breakfast signed "S. Oxon." On going to the address given he found it was a boot shop in Pall Mall and came away, deeming it, as he said, an impertinence that a bootmaker whom he did not know should invite him to breakfast. He afterward learned that the invitation was from the famous Bishop Wilberforce of Oxford, whose London lodgings were over the boot shop. The priest met him later and was greatly amused when the explorer told him of his mistake.

A Modern Diogenes.

Etzel, aged six, had gone down the village street with her new doll. It could be plainly seen that she was in dire distress. She stood still, and after a close scrutiny of several men who passed she accosted one.
"Say, are you an honest man?" she demanded.
"Why, yes, I think so," was the astonished reply.
"Well, then, if you're sure you're an honest man," said the little maid, "please hold my dolly while I tie my shoe."

Meaning of the Green Bough.

The custom of placing a green bough on the roof of a newly built house is not confined to Germany, when it was adopted by the French Canadians, who brought it with them from Brittany. The custom originated from the superstitious prevalent centuries ago that every tree is inhabited by a spirit; consequently it was believed that every time a tree was felled another spirit was dispossessed, and this was supposed to cause some bitterness on its part against society. Rather than risk having these come, and disgruntled spirits vent their ill feeling upon the houses under construction or upon the builders a branch was planted on the highest part of the house for their occupancy. They were then supposed to be mollified, and if they remained so until the roof was put on any evil design contemplated would prove harmless, for the spell would be broken.—Van Norden's Magazine.

Savona.

The history of Savona is that of a long struggle with the Genoese, ended not without a century, when they seized the town and rendered its harbor useless by sinking vessels filled with stones at the entrance. In 1746 it was captured by Sardinia, but soon fell again under the control of Genoa. The ancient Savo where Maestri stored his booty in the second Punic war, Savona was the birthplace of the popes Sixtus IV. and Julius II. and the house of the ancestors of Columbus, who bestowed its name on one of the first islands he discovered in the West Indies.—London Standard.

His Preference.

Five-year-old Hobble went visiting with his mother and, unexpectedly remaining overnight, was obliged to wear his cousin Kate's nightgown. The next morning he said tearfully, "Mamma, before I'll wear a girl's nightgown again I'll sleep raw."—Harper's Weekly.

Scotch Sabbath.

For traveling, trading and all the things one must not do on the Sabbath, Scotland, of course, must ever hold the palm. Not in the seventeenth century alone, but through all the ages and even until the present day the Scotch Sunday has a law unto itself. There is the experience of James Fyfe, for instance, in the Edinburgh of only the previous century, who wrote, "I first resided," he wrote, "it struck me that to judge by the drawn down blinds the people spent a good deal of their time in the afternoon of the day in bed. On my second Sunday, however, I was undeceived, for my landlady came up and informed me that, though she had not spoken of it last Sunday, she must now draw my attention to the fact that it was not usual in Edinburgh to draw up the window blinds on the Sabbath and that the neighbors had begun to remark upon the 'unusual appearance' of her establishment, which had heretofore been a God fearing house."

A Justifiable Protest.

"What's that?" cried the convicted incendiary. "Five years! Well, if you people ain't the worst I ever ran up against! Here I goes out in the evening 'an' 'ere I'm the tallest buildin' in town—sets fire to it so that in less'n a minute the thing's a shootin' blaze a hundred feet up into the sky. The whole population is there quicker'n a cat, all of 'em tickled to death at the sight! For four 'an' five hours you stood there watchin' the fire—hours of solid enjoyment, too—'an' it not costin' you a cent! Why, a circus or the theater or a scandal trial wouldn't have given you half as much fun, 'an' you know it! An' yet you sit there 'an' bring in a verdict givin' me five years in the penitentiary—see that's shown you all a good time 'an' ought to be considered as a benefactor if there was any gratitude in the human bosom"—Exchange.

Heat as a Healer.

Heat is one of the most important of stimulants to living cells. The hot bath is the commonest means of applying heat as a therapeutic agent and is useful in a great number of conditions, especially to plethoric individuals and in advanced tuberculosis. The usefulness of local applications of heat is well known. The general hot douche is a remarkable means to bring blood to the surface of the body, to accelerate the circulation, etc.—Exchange.

Common to the Kind.

"How do you recognize an infant industry?" inquired an English tourist of a colonial politician.

"Like most infants," answered the politician. "It is restless by the amount of noise it makes when it wants to be noticed."—London Telegraph.

Never.

Mrs. Benham—You still insist that women has more curiosity than men? Benham—Sure! Did you ever know a man to want to find out if he could get off a street car backward without consulting outside?—New York Press.

Installments.

"Do the Barkers own their piano?" "One octave of it."—Life.
